Deep Collaboration Power and Equity and Systems Leadership Training

Our community's vision is to achieve opportunity, equity, and quality of life for everyone. Together, with every voice, we can create a better future.

Reaching our vision, calls for new ways of working, learning and leading together, in and across community, government and non-government landscapes. It is strengthened by how we show up together and embrace respectfully differences and the diverse perspectives and experiences every person contributes.

Gain increased understanding and confidence for effective collaboration and changemaking:

- Understand the different types of power and authority that show up when people work together.
- How to build safe and courageous environments to grow collaborative momentum.
- Explore systems leadership to enable community-led change.

Previous Gladstone participants have said, they came into the learning thinking they had no authority to lead or make change, and left as change leaders.

Training is suited to local changemakers, leaders and partners passionate about shaping and sustaining the conditions and solutions together that pave the way for a brighter, positive, and thriving future for our region!

About the Training Facilitator

Mark Yettica-Paulson is an intercultural leadership and collaboration specialist, and Indigenous leader from the Birrah, Gamilaroi and Bundjalung peoples, from the Southeast Queensland and North East NSW regions. Mark is currently the Deep Collaboration Lead with Collaboration for Impact. He has provided strategic leadership advice and delivered intercultural leadership programs to multiple organisations, bringing decades of wisdom from his career in leadership development, diversity and inclusion, and community education.
